At 4 o'clock yesterday the Railroad Commissioners, Mr. Quintard, who is still with his wounded at Poughkeepsie, left one of the passenger cars of the Albany Express, accompanied by Mr. Shaw, the Superintendent, Mr. Comm[illegible] the Superintendent, Mr. Comm[illegible] and other officers of the road, went by a special train to the place of the accident, occupying the intervening time in a consultation upon the subject of the wreck and necessary arrangements for the future.

The following details of the crash had meanwhile been received, but there were still in the main points of interest doubt and hesitation, here and there, regarding the precise facts. Part of a freight car was found which had been thrown from the cars by the shock, and was discovered on the track. Some parts of the engine were to be seen, but owing to the wreckage of the big and the other, it contained with safety to be [illegible]

CONCLUDING PART OF THE TESTIMONY.

Testimony of Capt. Davis.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

At the stated term of Court, Zachariah Fenner, Esq., District Attorney, presiding, the case of Merchants' Mutual Insurance Company against Ezekiel Davis, Jr., and others, for the recovery of the value of the schooner Mary Pratt, and her cargo, lost on the coast of Africa, in the year 1850, while in charge of the defendants, as agents of the plaintiffs, was resumed and concluded. The case will occupy three days longer. We give the first part of the testimony below.

Mr. Gerard and Mr. Cutting for the plaintiffs; Mr. Fullerton and Mr. Fyke, for the defendants. The proceeding was continued from Saturday, Jan. 5, in the Southern District Court of the United States, before Judge Betts and a jury.

Witnesses were required to give information as to the vessel in question. It appeared he had been successively engaged in the Tuler Erie steamer, on the Erie Canal; in a dry goods store in Buffalo; then porter in a hotel, and a bar-tender, and came to New-York in January or February, 1850, to ship as seaman. A notary to whom he applied gave him information of the ship Rachel, which he went to see, but on board of which he did not ship, and while hesitating had an offer to ship on board this schooner.]

Q.—Did you ship as an ordinary seaman or a green hand? A.—I shipped on board the schooner for $16 a month, but I signed no articles, and cannot tell whether I was to ship as ordinary seaman or as a green hand; I never saw Capt. Davis before I went on board the vessel; saw Mr. Ezekiezia or Mr. Ezekiel; we sailed on the 11th of March; two weeks after we left port I heard that the vessel was lost.

Q.—Do you know Mr. Ezekiel Davis? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Did you understand what was to be the use of them? A.—They were to lay the goods through; they were to be placed over the water and forward.

Q.—Was anything done with the masts? A.—Yes, Sir; they were taken down.

Q.—On whose order was this done? A.—On Capt. Davis'.

Q.—Why did not the Spanish Captain give the order? A.—The Spanish Captain could not speak English.

Q.—Was any reason given by the Captain for taking down the masts? A.—We heard a gun fired and the Captain ordered the masts to be unshipped; whether the gun was fired from the river or from land I don't know.

Q.—Did you ever go on shore? A.—No.

Q.—Did you take any one on shore? A.—No.

Q.—What became of the vessel? A.—The day after a British man-of-war took us.

Q.—Were you ever down in the hold of the vessel? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—What cargo had you then on board, other than what you had discharged? A.—We had only ballast.

Q.—At the time you were taken where was Capt. Davis? A.—He was dead.

Q.—Where was the Spanish Captain? A.—He was on shore at Rio Congo.

Q.—At the time you were lying there, did you know what was to be taken on board? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—What was it? A.—[illegible]

Q.—Was it shipped? A.—[illegible]

Mr. Joachimsen put the question in another form.

Q.—How did you know this? A.—I was told by Captain Davis that he was going to take a cargo of negroes.

By the Court.—At that place? A.—While laying in the river.

Q.—Was any reason given by the Captain for taking down the masts? A.—He said he was going to take a prize crew on board, and he wanted to make a gun for the purpose; we had nearly all the provisions we had salt beef and pork and ship bread.

Q.—What became of the crew? A.—Two of us were taken to Sierra Leone.

Q.—Were you one of the two? A.—I was; the other was a native, by the Captain of the man-of-war, who gave them two days' provisions.

Q.—What became of the schooner? A.—She was taken to Sierra Leone; I was taken there with her.

Q.—What became of her there? A.—She was condemned; I saw pieces of her.

Q.—Did you ever see the Spanish Captain from the time he left the schooner in the Bay till this time? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—What did you do in Sierra Leone? A.—I was sick the first three or four months; I was in the Hospital; I was not paid any money on shore; I wanted to the Governor of the place that I wanted to go to the Hospital; he told me he could not adjust me, because I was brought in from a slaver; but he sent me to the Jail Hospital; and when I remained two weeks' time, I asked the Doctor if I could go out, and was told that I must pay for the food and medicine; I had had there; I got back to New-York by working my passage on board the ship Wm. Bell; I arrived here the 18th or 14th of February, 1850.

Q.—At the time you sailed from here did you know Mr. Ezekiel? A.—I did not.

Q.—When did you first become acquainted with him? About four or five days after I came back I went to his office; I was told by the clerk what I wanted; I told the clerk I had shipped on the schooner, and told the clerk what had happened. Mr. Davis was not there; I told the clerk I had not received my payment, and asked the clerk if he would give me a few dollars; I said I was on the schooner; he said I was not; I said I was; he said he would send me to Mr. Ezekiel; I went to him in Court street; I told him the particulars of the voyage, and he said he knew all about the vessel; he said he was going to have the vessel sent back; he gave me a dollar, and told me to come back in a few days; I heard the clerk converse about the matter in Spanish with Mr. Ezekiel; I understand a few words of Spanish; heard the clerk mention the names of the schooner and the Captain; Mr. Ezekiel spoke to the clerk before I came; I was there about half an hour; I was there with my brother; we had come there together; I left at that time; I was there four days and called at Mr. Ezekiel's; he asked him to be good enough to settle with me; my bill was large, for the time I was there; he said that a dollar was all I got from him; I did not speak to Mr. Ezekiel; the clerk said he knew the vessel was taken by a British man-of-war, and said that she was taken illegally, and that they had entered a [illegible]

[illegible] Mr. Ezekiel? A.—I did not.

Q.—Did you ever see Mr. Davis? A.—Yes, Sir; I saw him in the Spanish Consulate; I was there with Mr. Ezekiel; I was there about half an hour; I was there with my brother; I was there about half an hour; I was there with my brother; I was there about half an hour; I was there with my brother

The Remote "Emancipation Association," and a Gentle Hint.

The Sunset Mayor asked that his monument should not be raised until Ireland were free. All devout Irish Revolutionists joined by the memory of Emmet, and had learned equally to respect his wish and to use his monument. Hence, it comes to mean that joining an association, that aims to raise a monument to Mr. Emmet is equivalent to going in strong for the Freedom of Ireland. These associations have made a good deal of noise lately. Last evening, the Emmet Monument Association held a meeting at the Broadway Tabernacle. A large and enthusiastic "house full" were in attendance, and the exercises were quite lively and spirited—so much so that, the office is quiet enjoyment, a summary turning off of the gas was resorted to.

The meeting organized by the election of Captain P. T. Byrne as Chairman.

A long address was thereupon read by Col. Dudley. It opened with declaring that the object of the Association was not to secure political distinction or position. It acknowledged allegiance to the Republic of the United States, and expressed ardent loyalty to the Constitution. As some of Emmet's members owed a duty to their elder brethren, and it was their to aid in the attempt to establish the independence of Ireland. While acknowledging obligation to the laws of the United States, the members of the Association denounced any special allegiance applicable to themselves as a class. What Americans did for America, they considered it no crime for Irishmen to do for Ireland. It was one of their great objects to discipline their countrymen, that one day they might be able to aim a blow at their excellent enemy under the banner of the Republic of the United States, if possible, but if not, in any manner under the sun. Speeches, threats, or boasting was not what they wanted, but silent, steady work, with their teeth clenched, until an opportunity fitting to strike a blow offered itself. The concluding part of the address referred to the origin of the Association, and the obstacles that had been thrown in the way of its advancement. The Citizen has denounced it in unmeasured terms, and the action of the recent Astor House Convention.

The reading of the address was interrupted with frequent applause and hisses.

A series of resolutions were next read, indorsing the address, denouncing the late arrest of Gill-bustern in Cincinnati, but expressing personal sympathy with the movers in the same; and in conclusion pledging themselves to adhere to the Emmet Monument Association in its efforts to emancipate Ireland.

Speeches cheered by Oliver Byrne, Capt. James Burrin and Col. Dudley. Parties in the audience expressed their dissent to the speeches by groans, hisses and yells. The meeting and the row at length were brought to a simultaneous and sudden termination by the gas being turned off at 10½ o'clock. The crowd withdrew very peaceably.

The other "Real Original Genuine" Live Oak Club—The Second No. 1.

The first public meeting of this Club was held last evening at their rooms No. 780 Broadway. The Chair was occupied by the President, J. W. Barker. As in many other instances during the late Cold Term, the gas was partially frozen up, thus rendering the assembly literally a "dark lantern" party. A band of music enlivened, as far as possible, the dreary aspect of the room.

The Secretary, W. J. Fuller, read a paper giving some account of the organization of the Club, and its special object, namely, the election of George Law to the Presidency.

Mr. Barker, the President, (in the absence of other speakers, detained by sickness, (or prudence,) proceeded to state his views in regard to the present duty of the American Party. As a new party, composed alike of Whigs and Democrats, it was eminently fit that their candidate should be, politically, a new man. George Law was unquestionably the most proper person, all things considered, to occupy the White House. He would be acceptable alike to the mechanical, commercial and agricultural interests. Some think the 22d of next February too early a day to name a candidate for the Presidency. He thought it none too soon to put Mr. Law before the country, as it was probable several States would be found to urge the claims of their own favorites.

Mr. W. W. Foster followed, pronouncing not only the old Whig party defunct, but even the Democracy itself. He declared that George Law was the man to cleanse the Augean stables at Washington, where instead of three thousand oxen, that number of politicians has been meeting for the last half century.

Mr. J. W. Lawrence, formerly connected with the power of the Erie Railroad, was called on, and stated that as his views conflicted with the principles of this Club, he could not consistently occupy the time of the meeting.

Hon. E. W. Ammerman was next introduced, and indulged in a general panegyric on Live Oak George. He represented him as a self-made man, and one who, sustaining such a character, and untrammeled by politics, would reflect honor on the country as its Chief Magistrate. Allusion was made to his gigantic commercial enterprises, as indicating extraordinary energy and grasp of mind. Mr. Law was a man possessed of capacious intellect, and fully capable to "discharge the responsible duties that attach to the President of the United States.

Mr. Henry Lovell offered the following resolution which was adopted:

Resolved, That the thanks of "Live Oak Club, No. 1," be tendered to Thos. D. Jones, sculptor, for the splendid bust of New-York's favorite son, George Law, presented this evening in his behalf by W. W. Foster, Esq.

Resolved, That the Secretary transmit a copy of the above resolution to Mr. Jones.

The meeting then adjourned to Wednesday evening next—George Law not having been present to make a speech, as he did at the other No. 1 Club. This No. 1 insists, indeed, that Mr. Law was inveigled into that bogus concern, and that it was all wrong that he got there. We would suggest that now as each Club has got a copy of Jones' bust, a Committee be appointed to keep Royal Geneen at home, and let the worshippers bow before and puff the bust instead of the man. The whole history of President-making confirms the value of our advice.

The Arrested Fillibusters.

The case of the Fillibusters, arrested on the Star of the West, remains the same as reported in Thursday's Tribune—none of them yet having secured the required bail.

It is said that precautionary measures have been taken to prevent the departure of Mr. Fabens, in the contingency of any attempt on his part to do so. Mr. Fabens, to all seeming, evinces no such intent.

Cattle Coming.

The New-York and Harlem Railroad Company brought into the City yesterday and Wednesday night, six freight trains of stock and milk. In the stock train were 313 head of beef cattle, 383 sheep, and 120 calves. The severity of the weather rendered it almost impossible to keep engines from freezing up on the track, and snow drifting covers the track constantly. The passenger trains are running regular from the Twenty-seventh-street Dépôt.

IMPORTANT FROM ANTIGUA.

The Late Abduction of an American Seaman—The U. S. Sloop-of-War "Cyane" and H. B. M. Sloop-of-War "Medea," at Close Quarters.

We have already published an account of the rescue of a colored seaman (supposed to be a fugitive slave) from the American brig Lounge, by the authorities of Antigua. The affair, which took place on the 9th of November last, has since assumed no little importance. The Bermuda Gazette of Dec. 25 contains the following:

We hear from St. Thomas that the little frucas at Antigua, threatens to assume an importance not due to so trivial an occurrence. It seems that the American Government on receipt of the complaint of the captain whose vessel was invaded by the officials of Governor Hamilton, immediately dispatched the sloop of war Cyane, (84 guns,) of Nicaraguan renown, to the scene of the disturbance, intending to present them with the pleasing alternative of complying with the demands of General Fisher's Cabinet, whatever they might be, or of suffering the fate of Greytown. But, luckily, on her arrival at English Harbor, the Cyane found, much to her surprise, H. M. sloop-of-war Medea on the ground before her. One of the officers of the latter ship being sent on board the Cyane, Commander Fairfax, is reported to have informed him that he was most happy to see the Englishman as a private gentleman, but could have nothing to say to him in his official capacity, and furthermore, that he (Commander F.) would not salute the English flag until reparation was made to the American Government for the insult offered to the Stars and Stripes.

☞ The Cyane, on entering the harbor, had taken a very menacing position in regard to the Medea and forts, but the M., as soon as she had finished coaling, managed to place herself so as to put the Cyane in what would have been a very uncomfortable fix, had they come to blows.

Both parties, however, we believe, transformed themselves into diplomatists, with what success we have not been able to ascertain, but have understood that the quarrel has been transferred to a higher Court.

The Cyane left Antigua on the 15th or 16th December, and the M. an some twenty-four hours after.

Perhaps it may be considered as on the whole a fortunate coincidence that H. M. ship Medea was present when the Cyane reached Antigua.

It has been ascertained that the colored seaman taken from the American vessel at Antigua was not a slave as he at first represented himself to be.

Our files of Bermuda papers to the 25th ult. contain no other items of news.

FRIDAY, Jan. 11—P. M.

The changes in Stock and Money affairs to-day are not important. The business in the former was to a moderate amount in the Road and Transit shares, with only a fractional variation in prices, either way, from the sales of Thursday. The sales of State and Railroad Bonds amount to $140,000, of which $65,000 was done in Missouris, as low as 83¾ cash. Virginias, Indianas and Tennessees were a little weaker than at the previous transactions, while Illinois Centrals continue to sell freely every day at from 81¼@81¾ ⅌ cent. There was more than usual done to-day in several of the Western Road Stocks, though prices are not firmly supported, and in Panama, ex-dividend, at about par, equal to 106 before the dividend. The income account of this Road is as follows for the half year just closed:

Receipts and earnings for the year ending 30th of November last.....$517,987 25
Expenses.....282,980 00
Net earnings.....$235,017 25
Surplus 30th of June.....3,906 27
Estimate of December earnings.....166,900 00
Total earnings 31st of December.....405,926 40
Dividend paid.....280,077 80
Surplus.....$125,008 60

The transactions in Foreign Exchange for the Arago were somewhat irregular, but generally for first-class bills within the range 108¼@108⅝ on London; 5.22⅝@5.20 on Paris. The Southern mails are still behind, which fact would have told more decidedly on the market for Sterling, but for the closeness of Money. The Dry Goods entries this week add up over two and a half million in value. The regular Sub-Treasury balance now stands $2,801,702, against $1,993,761 at the close of last week. The first two weeks in the new year show an import of:

Foreign Cotton Goods	$2,062,832
Woolen Goods	1,852,796
Silk Goods	1,564,980
Total of three articles	$5,391,608
Against same weeks last year	1,902,058

The consumption of Foreign Goods in all the United States the past year, as set forth in the tables which accompany the Report of the Secretary of the Treasury, show the following comparative results with the year ending June 30, 1854:

IMPORTS CONSUMED.

Year.	Imports consumed.	Population.	Consumption per capita.
1854	$279,713,187	28,758,000	$16 90

The duty on Foreign Wines, not included in the valuation of the foregoing, is 40 ⅌ cent. ad valorem; the duty on Brandies and other distilled Spirits is 100 ⅌ cent. ad valorem. The marked reduction in the import of Brandies, as well as some descriptions of Wines, is the result of the short vintage of 1854 in France and Portugal. The Wine tables of the Secretary do not embrace Champagne, imported in glass, which we find, on reference to another document, amounted in 1855 to 157,717 dozen, of the value, before payment of duty, of $900,922, and there were other Wines, in glass, to the value of $556,330; making the whole consumption of Foreign Wines and Spirits, for 1855, before duty:

In casks	$4,612,752
In bottles	1,476,252
Total	$6,089,005

The Canada's mails from Europe to Dec. 29, which are a week behind, on account of the stormy passage of the steamer to Halifax and Boston, were delivered, this evening, at the New-York Post-Office, though not in season for distribution to the merchants generally. There is little that is new, after the Halifax summary by telegraph, in the papers or circulars. The Markets at London and Liverpool are dull, and the inquiry and rates for Money decidedly active and dear. The private bankers were allowing 5 ⅌ cent. on deposits, and getting from 6 to 7½ on paper. The Bank of England rates, 6 ⅌ cent., 60 days, and 7 for longer date, remain unchanged. The condition of the Bank, on the exhibit of Dec. 15, shows an improvement over the previous statement, though the publication of the report was preceded by the following announcement from the London Daily News, which, if true, is calculated to qualify the strength shown by the report. We find no reference to the fact stated about the Turkish loan in any other London journal:

"The public will probably be surprised to learn that, of the total amount of £3,000,000 which has been paid upon the Turkish £5,000,000 loan, only £1,500,000 has yet been applied to the service of the Ottoman Government. The remainder, or £1,500,000, is lying at the Bank of England, consigned under the head of 'other deposits.' The total amount of this item, as stated in the last published Bank return, was £11,719,199. The aggregate of the coin and bullion held by the Bank, it will be remembered, was also stated at £11,979,978. The knowledge that the heavy amount of £3,500,000 (in addition to the £1,151,[illegible] which has yet to be paid upon the loan) must ere long be remitted in gold to Constantinople, is calculated to render the Bank Directors very cautious, and points decidedly to a continuance of the tightness of the money market. We understand that the decrease of £141,000 exhibited in the coin and bullion in the last balance-sheet, in face of the purchase by the Bank of a large amount of Australian gold, was occasioned by a remittance on account of this loan."

From the London Times, Dec. 31.

The demand for money at the Bank of England is heavy, but scarcely more so than was anticipated for the close of the year. According to the last return the bullion was only £150,000 less than in October, when they received upon their existing rates, and, as the additional note issue of £475,000 just authorized, will enable them to dispense with a corresponding amount of gold without leaving them in a worse position, so far as their power of accommodating the public is concerned, than they were in at that period, there is no reason to presume that the present requirements upon them are such as to call for any immediate check. With regard to the future, the approaching termination of the payments on the Turkish Loan is a favorable feature, and although the absorption of specie on the Continent may be increased, considerable supplies can be looked for to enable to meet it. From Mexico a very large sum is due, South arrivals from Australia are now to be expected at any time, and, according to the last advices from New-York, it is not unlikely that the next steamer or the succeeding one may bring us some amounts from that City.

The latest report in the annexed movement of the Bank is on the enlarged basis of Bank Note circulation, viz., £14,475,000 Public Securities, instead of £14,000,000, which partly accounts for the increase in the Notes unemployed:

In reference to American Stocks the circulars correspond in quoting a tame market. Mr. Sartorius writes:

"There has been an inactive market for American Stocks during the past week. Transactions have been few and unimportant, and prices remain almost without change. The low prices from New-York by the last mail have checked purchases on this side. Erie Third Mortgage and Sinking Fund Bonds are rather freely offered, the supply being in excess of the demand."

The Circular of Baring Brothers remarks:

"American Stocks continue in limited demand, and quotations, in consequence, are nominal. United States 6s of 1862, Bonds, 108, payers. Alabama Sterling 5s, 91. Massachusetts Sterling 5s, 90@92. Maryland Sterling 6s, 90@92. Virginia Sterling 6s, 84@85; 6s, 86@88. Tennessee 6s, 86. New-Orleans City 6s, 79, ex div. Nova Scotia 6s, 105@105½."

On the general look of Money and the Manufacturing interest, the well-informed Liverpool circular of A. Denistoun & Co., reports:

"The thoughts of all Europe are once more turned in the direction of peace. Overtures approved by England and France have, it is understood, been forwarded within the last few days by Austria to the Court of Russia, and the answer of Russia, which may not, however, be received for some weeks, is anxiously looked for. In the meantime the Stock markets of London and Paris are steady at a slight decline on the highest rates current about a fortnight ago. Consols close 88¾ K ex div. for the account. The Money market is again rather more stringent, though no change can be quoted in the rates of discount. There have been no arrivals of Gold, and, in the absence of such, some parcels have been taken for export from the Bank. Trade in general is in the same quiet state in which it has been, since the cessation of the speculative movement early in November. At Manchester, stocks are reported to be very moderate, and producers to be full of orders; yet it is found impossible to obtain any but the most trivial advances in price, and both Spinners and Manufacturers complain of the generally unremunerative state of the trade."

The Grain and Flour market at Liverpool was somewhat unsettled. At the last market-day, a good number of millers were in attendance from a distance, expecting to buy at a material reduction, but being disappointed in the views of holders, a small business resulted. The decline is 3d. on Wheat and 1s. on Flour. More animation was looked for after the holidays. Indian Corn in steady demand at 49s. 6d.@44s. for Yellow and Mixed parcels. No White Corn on the market—it would bring 58s. to 55s., according to one of the circulars. In the Provision line, there was more doing in Bacon at 58s. The French and Irish packers were offering Pork 10s. cheaper than American. Lard scarce and wanted at 70s. Beef quite neglected. Cheese dull and irregular. The best feature in the Cotton trade is the continued firmness in Goods and Yarns at Manchester, which holds the market for the raw material steady at Liverpool, though the weekly sales are falling below the receipts. The stock of American Dec. 31 was 129,000, against 271,330 at same date in 1854, and the total stock 513,540, against 525,990 bales.
